PART - IV

41. a) The author's parents went to live in the city. The young author was left with his grandmother in the village. She was old and slightly bent. She loved him very much. She accompanied him to school as it was attached to the temple. While he was singing the alphabets in the school, the grandmother sat inside the temple reading the scriptures. In the evening, both returned home. The grandmother carried stale chapattis and fed the street dogs. When his parents were well settled in the city, the author and his grandmother went to live with them. There he joined in a city school and studied. The grandmother knew that she couldn't help the changes and accepted the fact. She used to spin wheels and recite prayers. She fed sparrows in the courtyard of the city house. The grandmother accepted the seclusion when the author went abroad for higher studies. After five years, he came back home. The next morning, she fell ill and she predicted her death. In the evening thousands of sparrows sat scattered near the grandmother's corpse. They flew away quietly when the corpse was carried off. (Prose Unit 1)

She retained her world title in 2006 by defeating Steluta Duta of Romania 22 – 7 at the Fourth World Championships in New Delhi. She considered it one of her greatest achievements. It was the most memorable for her because she was able to win at home. She got hat-trick win of world Championships. So the media named her the 'Queen of Boxing' and 'Magnificent Mary'. (Prose Unit 2)

42. a) The poet is a determined spectator. His own spirit is weak and shy. So he confesses that he is glad that he is neither a sportsman nor an athlete. He admires the talents of sportsmen and athletes who sweat for money or for pleasure. He derives satisfaction from watching the talents of all athletes, but does not wish to exchange places with them. The exchange of position with one of the athletes may please his ego. So whenever there is a conflict in the mind of the spectator between wisdom and fame, his wisdom always wins. He never considers to participate in any games or sports. (Poem Unit 2)

b) Gabriel Okara addresses this poem to his son. He brings out the difference between the behaviour of the people in the past and their behaviour at present. In the past, people laughed with their hearts sincerely. Laughing with one's heart reveals real gladness while laughing with one's teeth reveals one's external showy love. They greeted one another with real gladness. But now, people laugh without any real happiness and greet one another with an artificial, pretended smile. Okara says that he has also learnt to behave in an artificial manner like other people. The poet has learnt to change faces according to different situations. He has learnt to laugh artificially. The artificial smile of the poet made his teeth look in the mirror like those of a snake. The poet wanted his son to show him how to laugh genuinely. (Poem Unit 1)

Moral : Never change your originality for the sake of others.

Theme : Thrilling humour

A few patients were sitting in the waiting room of a dentist's clinic. Two or three were joining. Among them one lady was interested in showing her holiday photos to other patients. The dentist arrived and called Joe, the first patient into his room. The nurse came out, went into another room and brought a hammer. The patients heard the noise of hammering from the room. They thought that they were trying to pull out Joe's tooth. They were frightened. Next, the nurse came out and brought a pair of pliers. One more time she brought a hacksaw. The patients heard the noise of sawing. Joe's wife was scared and she began to weep. The other patients were all terrified and went out in a hurry. But Joe came out and explained his wife that the doctor had missed the key of his tools cabinet and tried to open his cabin with the hammer, pliers and hacksaw. The woman with the photographs was surprised that the queue had moved quickly and she was the next patient to get in. Thus the play is full of humour.

b) 'HARD WORK NEVER FAILS'

Hard work is the essence of the whole universe. There are many routes to a place, but success has only one route, i.e. Hard work which is also the shortcut. Hard work has no substitute. It gives pleasure, satisfaction and experience to anybody. If you put more efforts and spend more hours to study, you get more marks. Many years of hard work led to many useful inventions. Several days of voyage made discovery of many sea routes. Many students work while they study. They balance both with their hard work. One fine example for this is Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam. His continuous hard work molded him as a Scientist and later as a President of India.

Moral : Hard work never fails but never fail to work hard.
